

My Name is C.T. Morris. I go by Moss.

I am self-taught in all design software. There is nothing I cannot do in Photoshop or Illustrator. Windows or Mac.

I have worked professionally, sometimes casually, as a graphic/production designer since 2001. I am an expert in non-destructive design flow in all Adobe Creative Cloud apps. Pixel perfect UI, Smart objects, and layer comps are my besties! I'm also an OG in pre-press and print production.

Photoshop – Smart objects? Colour correction? Fully labeled layers and layer comp exports? BOOM!

Illustrator – Clipping mask Archmage. Pen tool Dominus.

InDesign – Small or large format print. Print shop perfect. Colour Palette guru. Also interactive eBook production. If that's your thing...

Thank you for taking the time to read this.

I hope my portfolio and experience is a good match for what you need.

I also have the best dog. I'll introduce you.

Regards,

Moss

Smart decisions make smart cities.

Everyone wants their city to be livable, thriving, clean, and fun. That's why it's more important than ever for cities to invest in infrastructure that makes smart living possible and profitable.

 THE CHALLENGE:
Cities have to manage economic constraints, rapid urbanization, and environmental sustainability. Not to mention evolving constituent expectations for public safety, health and wellness, and accessibility.

 THE SOLUTION:
Public infrastructure is any city's most powerful tool in creating a place people want to live, but it has to go beyond the basics. Cities today must also provide digital infrastructure to enable economic growth and effective, efficient public services.

Digital cities can generate $2.3 trillion globally through 2024.
That's a lot of digital value at stake. Take a look at the 9 areas driving cost savings, efficiencies, and revenue generation—and see how it all adds up.

$1.3 trillion: Next-generation workers
A digitally connected workforce is a force for good. Fueled by mobility, collaboration, and connected workspaces, next-gen workers can use real-time data to be more responsive to citizen needs.
Next-gen workers get stuff done >

$401 billion: City utilities and smart metering
Smart meters, together with data analytics and demand-response monitoring, tell cities how electric, water, and gas resources are being used—which leads to big savings.
Houston, we have smart meters >

$240 billion: Safety and security
Digital solutions dramatically reduce costs, better protect citizens, and increase the efficiency of public-safety workers. These solutions can include smart lighting, video surveillance, and emergency texting.

$188 billion: Transportation and urban mobility
Connected transportation combines intelligent sensors, advanced analytics, and remote monitoring to cut down on traffic, improve public transit, and make parking smarter.

Powering your industrial automation system has never been easier.

Using ON Semiconductor solutions to power your industrial automation designs can make them more reliable, flexible, and affordable. No matter what package size or power levels you need, we offer a comprehensive portfolio of components that are built to work together as a single, end-to-end solution—helping you build your system faster and more efficiently. We design our solutions with a deep understanding of the power demands you face, so when you're looking for the smartest solutions to your complex challenges, Think ON.

Cross-Border E-Commerce: PayPal/Ipsos Research Shows Who's Buying What, Where, and Why

In today's online shopping world, country borders don't stop shoppers. Increasingly, shoppers worldwide are turning to e-commerce sites in search of products and prices that might not be available in their country. As U.S. businesses try to take advantage of this trend, here are several countries they might want to consider, based on trends revealed by a PayPal/Ipsos report.

In the past year, 67% of adult Internet users in Brazil made purchases online; 45% of those shopped from international sites.¹

TOP CROSS-BORDER PURCHASE CATEGORIES¹

- Clothing, footwear, and accessories
- Cosmetics/beauty products
- Consumer electronics

DRIVERS FOR CROSS-BORDER SHOPPING¹

- Free shipping
- Safe way to pay
- Customer support in their language

REASONS THEY ABANDON A CROSS-BORDER PURCHASE¹

- Shipping charges too high
- Delivery time was too long
- Concerns about website security

them pay more for faster delivery times or choose a more economical rate if they're not pressed for time.

Setup

You are about to step into the meticulously polished boots of merchant trader captains!

- Deal Merchant House Seals (4a) and Merchant Vessel Standees. (4b)
- Place Game Board: Unfold the game board and place it in the centre of the play area within reach of all esteemed captains.
- Place Cards and Tokens: Set all the game tokens in piles in the play area. (2a) Then set the transit event cards face down in a pile within reach of everyone. (2b)
- Deal Merchant House Mats: Give one merchant house mat face down to each captain. They will then turn them over to reveal which venerated merchant house they represent.
- If you're playing with less than 6 captains, I would recommend dealing 6 destination cards for optimised gameplay.

Stratagem

If you're playing with less than 6 captains, I would recommend dealing 6 destination cards for optimised gameplay.

Meditations

Your upcoming leap into the void is destined to be quite an adventure. It would be less so if it didn't have a good story to go along with it.

As you travel the system seek not only wealth and prestige for your House, but an abundance of knowledge as well.

The written records I have put down for you should be used as a guide. They shall serve you best read aloud for all to hear.

As you reach your destinations or learn of a potential setback during a transit, regale your fellow merchants with these lines meant to instruct and entertain.

It would do well to spread the knowledge throughout your ship. After all, any captain leading a crew of thousands should well know how dangerous a ship can become if those living and toiling within become listless.

If no captain is representing that merchant house, just subtract 1 from your ship's hold tracker.

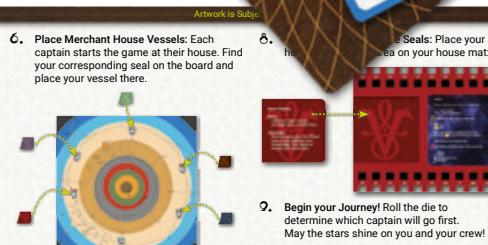

Object of the Game

As Merchants of Sol, your goal is to reach all of your destinations whilst collecting as much cargo as you can along the way. There will be many challenges to overcome. To travel through the void unmarked by hardship is a fool's dream.

The system is filled with pirates, mutants, endless bureaucracy, and—worst of all—other merchants.

A keen mind can turn the tide. Just remember, even for the saltiest of captains, Lady Luck can be quite fickle.

Stratagem

You may travel straight through another merchant's house if it lies in your path (we might have contraband in our holds, but we will always extend common courtesies and would, naturally, expect the same).

However, if you land on another merchant's house at the end of your turn, you must pay that merchant tribute. Do so by subtracting one silver cargo from your ship hold tracker.(1)

Meanwhile, the player who's House you've landed should add one silver cargo on their ship hold tracker. (2)

If no captain is representing that merchant house, just subtract 1 from your ship hold

Playing the Game

Each round, captains will roll the 12-sided die, then move their ship along the black lines.

You can move in any direction along the black lines, using each black dot as one count: roll a 5, go along one black line five black dots.

Once your heading is chosen however, you must continue in that direction for your turn. To do otherwise is most unbecoming for one of your stations...

On the system map, each black dot represents an Ostium (plural Ostia). The Ostia are stable wormholes, which act as gates, allowing the near instantaneous transition through millions of kilometres of real-space.

The white orbit lines of the outer planets are not travel ways.

Collecting cargo

Use whatever number you just rolled for movement to determine what type of cargo to collect.

1-6: 1 silver cargo (a)

7-12: 1 black contraband (b)

13-18: 1 gold cargo (c)

19-24: 1 platinum cargo (d)

25-30: 1 diamond cargo (e)

31-36: 1 emerald cargo (f)

37-42: 1 sapphire cargo (g)

43-48: 1 topaz cargo (h)

49-54: 1 amethyst cargo (i)

55-60: 1 rubies cargo (j)

61-66: 1 opal cargo (k)

67-72: 1 emerald cargo (l)

Stratagem

Anytime you're unsure of a rule or mechanic in the game, a quick glance at your merchant house mat will keep you on course.

When you have a status token on your merchant house mat, you can't move until you resolve it.

That means you also can't be moved by another captain (moving other captains sometimes happens during transit events).

Status Tokens:

Movement & Collecting Cargo Examples

House Valerian is traveling through Jupiter's orbit. They roll to move and come up with a 2. (ingr... traffic...)

Since 3 is on the silver side of the d12, they collect 1 silver cargo.

What would happen if they had reached a destination, or had to complete a transit and stop on a red dot?

Point 3 (x-i-kx) was 8 dots from where they were, but they rolled a 10.

Had they rolled a 3 however, they would have landed on JL3 Station. A labelled dot!

They are wanting to transit to Saturn's orbit so must stop, and since 10 is on the black side of the d12, they collect 1 black contraband!
